

A History of International Law in War and Peace

by

Harald Kleinschmidt

2016

© 2016 Harald Kleinschmidt for the English version.

The original version of this text was published in the German language under the title Geschichte des Völkerrechts in Krieg und Frieden by Francke Verlag Tübingen in 2013. © 2013 Narr Francke Attempto Verlag GmbH + Co KG, Dischingerweg 5, D-72070 Tübingen.

All rights Reserved.

Except as permitted under current legislation, no part of this work may be printed, photocopied, stored in a retrieval system other than the one in which it is already available, published, performed in public, adapted, broadcast, transmitted, recorded or reproduced in any form or by any means without prior permission of the copyright owners.

Table of Contents

Chapter I: Narrating the History of International Law	7
Two Court Decisions	7
What is International Law?	11
International Legal Subjects, Mainly States, and the So-called International Legal Order	15
Might and Right, War and Peace	17
History of the Historiography of International Law	21
Principles Underlying the Following Narrative	26
Chapter II: One versus Many. Prophecies of World Rule and Manifest Rule over Cities (to c. 500 CE)	29
The Earliest Extant Written Records on the Law of War and Peace	29
The Emergence of Claims towards World Rule	32
New Urban Landscapes	34
The Fusion of Urban with World Rule in Rome	37
The Theory of the Law of War and Peace in Late Republican Rome	38
The Theory of the Law of War and Peace in the Roman Imperium	41
The Law of War and Peace in East Asia	46
Summary	48
Chapter III: The Whole and the Parts. Emperors, Khalifs, and Other Rulers (c. 500 – c. 1000)	51
The Roman Empire and Its Northern Neighbours	51
The Ideology of World Rule and the Pragmatics of Diplomacy	54
The Mission of the Catholic Church, War and Security	58
Conceiving Rule as Office	63
The King of the Franks as Emperor	65
Rulers' Promises as Binding Obligations according to the Law of War and Peace in Latin Christendom	69
The Law of War and Peace in Islam	72
The Law of War and Peace in Byzantine Perspective	74
The Emperor and the World	76
Summary	78
Chapter IV: Clerics, Merchants, Warriors and Controversies about the Entitlement to War c. 1000 – c. 1450)	81
Claims for Autonomy	81
Claims for World Rule and the Right to War	85
Concrete Norms of the Law in War and Programs for Peace	90
The Crusades and the Law of War	92
New Elements in the Theory of the Law of War and Peace	96
Autonomy of Rule and the Law	99
Revisions of the Law of Peace: Diplomacy and the Law of Treaties	104
Summary	107
Chapter V: The Diversity of States and the Quest for the Unity of the World (c. 1450 – 1618)	113
Portugal, Spain and the Expansion of Rule beyond Europe	113
The Holy Roman Empire and the Politics of the Expansion of Rule	119

The Globalisation of the World Picture and the Beginning of the Establishment of European Overseas Colonial Rule	122
Problems within the Holy Roman Empire	126
Imperial Law as Law of War and Peace and the Concept of Sovereignty	129
Expanding the Law of War and Peace to America	131
The Emergence of the Concept of the Law among States	136
Theories about the Establishment of Rule and the Perception of the World as an Ordered System	140
The Ordered World and War	143
The Ordered World and the Regulation of Peace	145
Trade in the Well-Ordered World and the European States System	154
Summary	157
Chapter VI: Incentives for War and the Law of War (1618 – 1648/59)	161
The Holy Roman Empire and the European States System	161
Conducting War over the Right to War	164
The Search for Peace	168
Conceiving the Law of War and Peace as Law among States and Hugo Grotius	171
Summary	178
Chapter VII: A World of Many: Giving up the Belief in the Possibility of Universal Rule (1648/59 – 1714)	181
A Description of the “State” of the Holy Roman Empire	181
The Law of the Rulers and the Law of the States	185
Expansion and Centralisation of Rule in Europe	190
The Law among States and the Law of Nature	195
The Machine, the Order of Nature and the Balance of Power	201
Summary	205
Chapter VIII: The Preservation of Balance as a Legal Obligation (1713 – 1789)	207
Problems of Hereditary Succession, States and War	207
The Regularisation of War	216
Peace Programs and the Law of Peace Treaties	222
States, Statistics and the Equilibrium	228
Diplomats and Jurists as Managers of the Equilibrium	233
Government within a State under the Rule of Law	239
The Theory of the Law among States in University Curricula	243
Summary	248
Chapter IX: Revolution and Law (1789 – 1856)	251
The Collapse of the European States System	251
War and State-Making	259
The Reformulation of the Model for the Balance of Power	266
New Theories of War and Peace	274
The Expansion of International Law	278
The Reduction of the Number of Actors under International Law	286
Imposing the European Public Law of Treaties between States in West, South, Southeast and East Asia as well as in the South Pacific	290
Early Forms of the Expansion of European Government
Colonial Control in Africa	300
The Transformation of the Concept of War in the Early

Nineteenth Century	305
The Concept of War in International Legal Theory	309
The Reformulation of the Law of Peace	311
Summary	312
Chapter X: The Delimitation of the World and the Competition among States (1857 – 1918)	315
Nations and States, Delimitation and Cross-Border Communication	315
The Expansion of European Colonial Rule	324
Colonial Rule, the International Peace Movement and World Politics	336
International Law as an Instrument for the Legitimation of Colonial Rule	344
Colonial Expansion without Direct or Indirect Rule	352
Colonialism and Treaties on the Establishment of International Organisations	362
Theories of Colonial War	364
Questions about the Sources of International Law and the Possibility of Its Derivation	375
Teaching International Law in Universities and the Establishment of International Law as a Legal Discipline	382
Summary	387
Chapter XI: Exclusion and Block Formation (1918 – 1945)	393
The Peace Agreements of 1919/1920 and the Foundation of the League of Nations	393
The League of Nations and the Soviet Union	399
The League of Nations and Colonial Rule	402
The Practical Implementation of Colonial Rule during the 1920s and 1930s	405
The League of Nations and the Theory of International Law and International Relations	409
The Impact of the League of Nations on International Legal Theory during the 1920s	413
The Concept of the State in the Theory of International Law, Pan Europe and the League of Nations	419
Block Formation in East Asia and Europe	423
Summary	434
Chapter XII: The Protracted End of the Blocks (since 1945)	437
Block Formation during World War II, the Early Post-War Period and Decolonisation	437
The UN and International law	444
Regional Institutions and International Law	446
The Impact of International Law and Regional Legal Systems on the Blocks	448
Change and Continuity of International Legal Theory at the Turn towards the Twenty-First Century	450
The Resumption of the Concept of the “Family of Nations” as the “Society of Peoples” at the Turn towards the Twenty-First Century	455
Summary	458

